1966 MEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

The greatest international golf gathering in history occurred in October, 1966, in Mexico City. Nineteen women's teams and 32 men's teams came together for World Championships in successive weeks. Officials accompanying them shared insights and experiences. They were all together at one memorable dinner with 700 guests at the Mexico City Country Club.

All this could only have been brought off by a people as warm-hearted as Mexicans and by an organization as efficient as the Mexican Golf Association.

Above all, the occasion was one to be treasured in memory because it brought to many participants a rediscovery of their common humanity. Divisive artificial barriers with which men separate themselves from one another crumbled away before the warmth of good fellowship and sportsmanship.

From the playing standpoint, one of the most significant developments was that after the first round in the men's World Amateur Team Championship, the eight leading teams came from six continents of the earth (and the United States was not among them). The widening influence of golf was never more conspicuous.

This was the fifth World Championship for the Eisenhower Trophy, and it produced Australia's second victory, the first having come in the inaugural event in 1958. Australia's win was a true team effort by Harry Berwick, Phillip Billings, Kevin Donohoe and Kevin Hartley, with Daniel H. Dwyer as non-playing Captain.

In the end, Australia won by two strokes over the United States, 877 to 879. Great Britain and Ireland was third with 883 in defending the Championship. The Championship was played over the wonderful course of the Club de Golf Mexico.

Australia's lone sub-par round was a 68 by Hartley on opening day, and it paced his side to a six-stroke lead over South Africa, 214 to 220.

After the second round, Australia was seven strokes ahead of South Africa, but both Britain and America had vaulted over all others to be tied for third.

South Africa made a great move the next day, producing two splendid 70s, one by Bobby Cole, its 18-year-old prodigy who held the British Amateur Championship, the other by Dave Symons. With a round to go, the standing was: South Africa 657, Australia 658, United States 663, Great Britain and Ireland 666, Mexico 667.

And so the stage was set for a great finale. The three leaders were drawn together, and this produced an important grouping in Harry Berwick, a 43-year-old Australian who first won his nation's Amateur Championship in 1950, Bobby Cole, and Deane Beman, of the United States. Berwick closed with a steady par round of 72, and it turned out to be the best for his side. No Australian was over 74 in the decisive round.

Beman nearly brought it off for America. He caught fire with four birdies in the last nine, and his 69 was the best American score of the week.

There is no individual prize in the World Team Championship, but it must be noted that R. D. B. M. Shade, of Britain, had 283, five below par, and it was easily the best score for 72 holes. It is not for naught that Shade's initials and his skill have earned the young Scot the nickname of "Right Down the Bloody Middle."

Second best score of 290 was produced by Patrick Cros, of France, whose sister was a member of France's ladies' team. Next at 291 were Deane Beman and Ginjiro Nakabe, of Japan.

The Mexican Golf Association, under the presidency of Benjamin Burillo, had a most effective tournament organization. Julio Orvananos was overall Chairman, with Rodolfo Patron as Chairman for the Women's Championship, Raul Valdes as Chairman for the Men's Championship, and Alfonso Estrada rounding out the Executive Committee. A former President of the Republic, Miguel Aleman, lent his presence and the Government's blessing to two eminently happy and successful weeks.

Australian Stalwart. Harry Berwick, age 43, produced the best closing round in his Team's victory, a par 72.

Lowest Scorer. Ronald D. B. M. Shade, of Great Britain and Ireland, had 283 for 72 holes.

Officials of the Mexican Golf Association and the World Amateur Golf Council. Sixth from left is Miguel Aleman, former President of the Republic of Mexico.

Delegates and Duffers Cup

A side event to the men's World Championship is the Delegates and Duffers Cup 36-hole competition, among delegates, non-playing captains and officials of the host association. In 1966 it ended in a tie at 143 net between Seymour Marvin, of Brazil, and Richard Mackie, of New Zealand.

After a nine-hole play-off they were still tied at 36 net, so it was decided to have no further play-off but to enter both names on the trophy. Marvin, the first winner in 1958, graciously arranged for Mackie to hold the trophy for the next two years. Third place went to Juan Antonio Andreu, of Spain, with 144 net.

In the guest division, John D. Ames, United States, a founder of the World Council, was low with 147, followed by Hord W. Hardin, USA, 148.

Meeting of World Council

The Biennial Meeting of the World Amateur Golf Council was held at the Club de Golf Mexico on October 26, 1966. Among the actions were:

Minimum age would be 55 years. An invitation from the United States to entertain the first event was accepted.
2. Acceptance of Australia's invitation to

1966 WOMEN'S TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

The seed planted in 1964 blossomed two years later into the first Women's World Amateur Team Championship to be sponsored by the World Amateur Golf Council. Representatives of 19 countries met at the Mexico City Country Club. The inaugural event for the Espirito Santo Trophy in 1964 had been held at St. Germain, near Paris, under the good auspices of the French Golf Federation.

The 1966 Championship was won by the United States with a score of 580. Canada was second with 589, followed by France, with 597. The French ladies had won the 1964 event in their homeland.

The United States ladies played without Mrs. Donald R. Carner, then their National Champion. Seventeen-year-old Miss Shelley Hamlin, who replaced Mrs. Carner shortly before the team left for Mexico, scored 72s in the last two rounds, the best scores for the American team over the final 36 holes. Mrs. David Welts and Mrs. Teddy Boddie each had 71s earlier.

Under the Rules of the competition, each team was allowed three players, with the two best scores counting in the daily total. Mrs. Boddie's score counted in each of the four rounds.

The United States team led every round, taking a one-stroke lead over Italy with 145 the first day. A second round of 144 put the Americans in front by eight strokes over France. By the end of the third round the United States was still in front by eight strokes over Canada, which moved into second place on the strength of Mrs. J. Douglas Streit's 70. The United States team scored 145 again in the final round. Mrs. Theodore W. Hawes was non-playing Captain of the American team.

Mrs. Streit, Canada's petite star, had the low individual score of 289, one over par. Mrs. Boddie was second with 292, and Miss Catherine Lacoste, of France, was third with 295.

Rodolfo Patron was Chairman of the Mexican Golf Association's excellent committees.

1967 SENIOR TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP

To the spreading list of international competition was added in 1967 the Senior World Amateur Team Championship for golfers 55 years of age and older. It was inaugurated by the World Amateur Golf Council on a suggestion of the United States Golf Association.

The event was played for the first time in November, 1967, over the No. 2 Course of the Pinehurst Country Club, Pinehurst, North Carolina, one of America's great courses. It was won by the United States with a team score of 903. Canada was second with 920, and Australia third with 940.

Eleven countries were represented in the competition for the Shun Nomura Trophy, which was presented by friends of golf in Japan through the Japan Golf Association.

Each team was allowed four players; each day the three best individual scores made up the team's score. The sum of the four daily totals determined the winner.

Robert B. Kiersky and Raymond Palmer led the United States to the victory. Kiersky the 1965 Senior Amateur Champion of the USGA, scored 297 for the four rounds, and Palmer, the current USGA Senior Amateur Champion, scored 301. Those were the low individual scores. Lionel Bowditch, of Australia, was next with 302.

The United States took an eight-stroke lead over Canada and Great Britain and Ireland in the first round when David Goldman, Kiersky and Palmer combined to score 226. George C. Beechler and Palmer had 74s in the second round, and with Kiersky's 75, the Americans had a second-round score of 223, to lead at 36 holes by 12 strokes over Canada, 449-461. The advantage increased daily the last two rounds. J. Ellis Knowles was non-playing Captain of the American team.

Peter V. Tufts was Chairman of Pinehurst's splendid committee
